PRELUDE

Contemporary Economics engages with empirical validation of economic theories and reliable forecasting using data. Applied Econometrics via dynamic integration of economic theory and data provides scrupulous insights into the working of economies across globe. In this context, this workshop is designed as a rigorous course on research methods with focus on applied econometrics and hands on training. It is expected to provide a perfect platform to research scholars and young faculty members for understanding theoretical and empirical issues involved in data analysis. Alongside hard-core theoretical discussions, emphasis would be on practical (applied) aspects in order to help participants to learn the technicalities in a systematic manner. Additionally, adequate time will be devoted towards understanding the application of relevant statistical packages. Participants will be able to develop conceptual clarity regarding research methods, econometric methodology and necessary expertise on statistical packages for data analysis and reporting.
